Making the Case for Life: Lawyers and the Death Penalty

Akin Adepoju, Esq. '04

Akin Adepoju, RWU School of Law Class of 2004, serves in the Trial and Capital Habeas Units at the Federal Defender's Office for the Western District of Pennsylvania. Before his appointment with the Federal Defender, he was a J. Kirk Osborn Fellow with the Fair Trial Initiative, a death penalty litigation organization in North Carolina. Akin has assisted in representing clients in a wide variety of cases, from capital trials in state court to white collar offenses, acts of terrorism, and on death row in federal court. Akin currently serves on the boards of Fair Trial Initiative and the ACLU of Pennsylvania, and as co-chair of the Pennsylvania Minority Bar Government Attorneys Subcommittee. He is the 2012 recipient of the Feinstein Institute for Legal Service Public Interest Alumni Award.

Monday, October 22, 2012 • 4:45 pm School of Law, Room 262

Sponsored by the Feinstein Institute for Legal Service

RWU Law