2016 Pro Bono Service Award Recipients

Jason Hortenstine

Heller, Holmes & Associates, P.C.

Although he is early in his legal career, Jason Hortenstine has already demonstrated a commitment to pro bono legal work and volunteerism. In addition to volunteering with the Special Olympics and Rotary Food Drive, Jason spent 117.85 hours on a contested divorce case that was closed last year. He works at Heller, Holmes & Associates, a firm with a strong commitment to pro bono. In 2015, Jason won the Lincoln Award Legal Writing Contest for the Illinois Bar Journal, and his winning article, "A Guide to the Loss of Chance Doctrine in Illinois" was published in the IBJ in February 2015. He graduated magna cum laude from Southern Illinois University School of Law.

Carlton Kagawa

Carlton M. Kagawa Law Offices

In his first pro bono referral, Carl Kagawa spent three years with his client, a young woman for whom he obtained a divorce with custody and child support, and then followed up to assist her with contempt proceedings when the father did not pay child support as ordered. When the client first contacted Land of Lincoln, DCFS was involved with both of the parties and their two children. Carl was able to obtain a final judgment within a year of filing the Petition. He continued assisting the client with pursuing child support through the end of 2014. In the past few months, Carl has taken on representation of another woman in a case involving divorce and custody of four children.
